British Columbia Plan Continued To Insuring Against Cost Of Illness

Commenting on the recommendation of the state health insurance commission that compulsory state health insurance be instituted in British Columbia, Mr. Speaker C. F. David, the chairman, said, in part: "Our problem had nothing to do with unemployment insurance. It was confined strictly to the question of insuring against the cost of sickness. The finances of the British scheme have become embroiled by reason of failure to keep these two subjects separate, and, by permitting the insurance fund to be converted into a financial relief measure, its financial structure has been jeopardized."

"In any insurance scheme, the fund can only provide what the contributors are paying for, and if unemployment relief is granted from a fund which is designed only for sickness aid, then, of course, disaster will follow. And a healthy fund subjected to such unscientific treatment will, of necessity, collapse."

"Almost every important country in Europe has now embraced the principle of compulsory sickness insurance."

"If British Columbia adopts the system, this will be the first time of the North American continent to show the way towards scientific health practice."

"We will be in a position to aid the pitfalls and other disadvantageous features revealed in the systems of other countries and to establish a scheme which will function satisfactorily."

"The difficulty is going to be to make the people understand that the scheme can be practically self-supporting, with no added expense either to the state or to the employer or labor. These two institutions have not been heavily taxed upon in the past, in connection with the state or labor, that they 'see red' when any thing bearing the name of a social service is mentioned. In health insurance, however, less the relief not only of the state, the employer and the employee, but also that of the hospital."

Good Season For Trappers

Successful Catch Of Fur Reported In Northern Areas

Trappers in most sections of northern Manitoba and Saskatchewan, and up along the rugged coast of Hudson Bay, are having a highly successful season, according to reports received in the West. Only the most settled portions of the northern part of the province, areas that have been trapped for generations, are showing any signs of lack of fur.

In the Nelson House district and around south Indian Lake the catch has been generally good. Northern Saskatchewan has had a very good season to date and huge hauls of fur will soon be going on the market for that area. The climate is playing a big part in the historic fur trade in the north country this season as most of the catches will be brought from the lonely trading posts to the lake by that means. In the Cedar Lake area in northern Manitoba the report has been to the effect the country is "trapped out," but Indians predict next year will see a big season there again.

Opportunity For Farmer

The Farmer's Advocate says there may be 2,000,000 pounds of Canadian-grown alfalfa seed that will not be needed this spring unless the acreage is increased. That situation presents a wonderful opportunity to those who know the value of alfalfa.

FAMOUS BRITISH CATHEDRAL NOW REPORTED SAFE

After working diligently for more than seventeen years to save the Great Dome of St. Paul's Cathedral, London, England, from disaster, architects and construction experts announce that the sinking of the foundations has been stopped and there are no more danger signs. Standing for hundreds of years serenely surveying the great city of London, the masterpiece of Sir Christopher Wren was recently found to be in a serious condition owing to shifting foundations. Appeals were made for funds, and a sum of more than $2,000,000 was donated to save the structure for the succeeding generations. Above are two pictures of the Dome. The picture least shows the top portion of the Dome, while the main picture gives a good idea of the false dome just below the gigantic cross.

"Settlement" At Shanghai

International City In China Joint Property Of Treaty Powers

The distinction between the International Settlement and the Chinese (or "Native" or "Wahing") City at Shanghai needs to be remembered. Shanghai was one of the five ports in China opened to foreign residence and trade by the British Treaty of Nanjing of 1842. Under this treaty a site was set apart, adjacent to but outside the Chinese city, where British subjects were allowed to reside "without molestation or restraint." Subsequently other powers obtained the same privilege for their nationals. That was the beginning of the International Settlement, which has grown to be the most important commercial city in China, completely overshadowing the ancient city under whose walls it was developed.

Although China has never alienated the soil upon which the Settlement stands, the proprietorship of everything above ground rests jointly in the treaty powers. Their Consular representatives govern the Settlement, with right of appeal to Diplomatic Corps, although the administration is in the hands of a Municipal Council elected by the ratepayers. The numerical strength of the British in the Settlement has conveyed the impression to many that it is a British colony. As a matter of fact British rights and obligations respecting the Settlement are no different from those of the United States or any other of the powers. Consequently the invasion of the Settlement by any one power, whether a treaty power or not, would be an invasion of the territorial sovereignty of all the treaty powers represented at Shanghai—and might provoke the most serious consequences.

New Material For Windows

English Scientist Makes Hard Transparent Substance From Molasses

An English scientist has developed a method which may prove one of the most important inventions for many years. At the present time the world produces more sugar than it can use for food. One of the great problems is to know what to do with the surplus. The invention concerns a process by means of which crude sugar in the form of molasses can be converted into a substance as hard and as transparent as glass. It has, moreover, the valuable property of passing the health-giving ultra-violet rays which are stopped by ordinary window-glass. The material can be blown, moulded, or rolled, like the glass.

Would Protect Beaver

Change In Game Regulations Is Advocated In Order To Prevent Extirpation

Unless an immediate change is made in game regulations, north of township 52, extermination of the beaver of Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Alberta is in sight, a delegation from Prince Albert informed the government at Regina.

Cyril March, head of the delegation, states an effort will be made to retain the closed season in the northern half of the province. Under the present act the closed season expired at the end of last year.

"There are only a few colonies of beaver in the North at the present time," Mr. March said. "The season has been opened in Manitoba and Alberta and between legitimate trappers and the illegal destruction, the beaver will have much of a chance. As far as we can estimate, there will be about 12,000 beaver at the mercy of the trapper this season and if some kind of regulation for a closed season is not adopted all the beaver that will be left in the north will be on the reserves."

Keeps the Same Course

Idea That Gulf Stream Changes Has No Foundation

As if there were not enough things to worry about already, another attempt is being made to campaign wrongly that the Gulf Stream has changed its course. This is a subject on which the defenders of the post can afford to be dogmatic. The Gulf Stream is conservative; ages ago it made its bed and it is content to lie in it. Though the Bank of England quit selling gold, though Gibraltar lost its impregnability, the Gulf Stream keeps to its course, undisturbed by the accumulation of inconspicuous little men bring against it.

Good For the Pin Trade

Shirt Manufacturers Explain Why So Many Are Used

Why are there so many pins in new shirts? British manufacturers are trying to break away from a tradition, which has cost 15,000,000 man millions of pounds removing 1,000,000,000 pins from the 100,000,000 shirts sold annually in Britain.

Every new shirt when it comes from the manufacturer is fastened into shape by 13 tiny pins. These pins are fixed under the cuffs, between the sleeves and the body, and in other unlikely places, which, as a rule, are not discovered until the purchaser is in a hurry to change.

They are small pins and often they are found only by a painful process of trial and error. They tax the patience of the purchaser, and add to the cost of the shirt without serving any useful purpose.

The chairman of a British shirt-making firm said that the manufacturers would be glad to release the number of pins used in "dressing" shirts before they are sent to the retailers.

"But experience has taught us," he said, "that the lavish use of pins on cheap shirts to be packed in a small space than when they are merely folded."

"We tried using clips, but they were not so effective."

The manager of a well-stored store which sells thousands of shirts every year said that a large number of pins were necessary to keep the shirts in shape.

"They are constantly being taken out of boxes to be shown to customers, and have to be replaced hurriedly," he said. "If it were not for the pins they would be out of shape in a week."

A representative of a Birmingham shirt manufacturer said that the pin trade was largely dependent on men's wear.

"A very few pins are used in women's garments," he said.

"If they are used the women always keeps them for use again. Men do not. They throw them away."

"It is how the pin trade is kept going. Our business has been built up on the wasteful tendencies of impatient men."

In Praise Of England

Lecturer Delivers Glowing Eulogy Of England and Englishmen

Leaders of thought in the United States and France are now arriving at the same conclusions as Lord Balfour, noted British statesman, reached ten years ago on the subject of war debts. Dr. J. W. Brady, lecturer and author, of Toronto, told the Canadian Club at St. Catharines.

"Taking as his subject 'Where Now Stands England,' Dr. Brady disagreed strongly with those who would argue that for the passing of England and begin to write her epitaph. Not content with his statements, Mr. Brady endeavored to immortalize facts to prove his point, referring to Britain's unchallenged place in the world of commerce, workmanship, sport, politics, science and art."

Speaking of the athletic form of government, the speaker said, respectfully, that he did not believe the antiquated form of monarchial government, but he asked, in what country was it so easy for men from humble homes to rise to the highest positions. He quoted the success of Lloyd George, Ramsey MacDonald, Arthur Henderson and Sir John Simon, all men of humble birth, all playing a big part in Britain's destiny today.

Turning then to England's contributions to Canada, Dr. Brady, himself a son of old Ontario, referred to the boys from Dr. Hamard's Home in London, England, and said that over two per cent of the people of British stock in this country were themselves from the Hamard home, or descendants of those sent to this country.

Dr. Brady said that 17,000,000 acres in Canada were titled by Hamard boys and their families, while the Hamards have given Canada, besides railroads, doctors, famous lawyers and leaders in all walks of life.

Dr. Brady concluded on a note of optimism as far as England was concerned. He spent ten years and recently received a doctor's degree from the University of London for his "Life of Shakespeare."

Tests Were Satisfactory

Scientists Make Crows With Treated Glands Fly North In Winter

Nearly half the 260 crows released at Hackett on November 26 by Professor William Rowan of the Zoology Department, at the University of Alberta, have been recovered, and the details of their recovery support Professor Rowan's revolutionary doctrine of the causation of migration.

This was learned in an interview with Professor Rowan. The crows, released in course of an experiment to show that migration is an inborn instinct which can be modified by treatment of the endocrine glands, were treated in different ways.

One group of birds, treated with long hours of artificial light and serum designed to reverse their natural instincts, should, according to the professor's theory, have flown northwest instead of following the southwest direction of normal crows. These birds, with tails painted bright yellow to distinguish them from their differently treated brothers, showed the poorest percentage of capture.

"Only 40 per cent of the birds in this group have been recovered," Professor Rowan said. "In some other groups returns have been as high as 80 per cent. The birds were very good, and none of the other groups were lower than 55 per cent."

"Of these the reverse to what was anticipated. We expected that the yellow tails would arouse curiosity and so produce what we want—an unusually high death rate in this group."

"Of these northbound birds, individually, they have been remarkable success, and many, but approximately in line with Dunstan, the point from which we now have the long distance flight record."

"As far as the remaining groups of crows are concerned, the experiments have been a remarkable success. Returns have been adequate and the behaviour of the birds involved has been in uniform in all cases that the results are quite decisive."

Some Spiders Are Valuable

Only Certain Kind Spin Thread Which Is Useful

There are many kinds of money-spinning spiders, but spiders today really do spin cobwebs that are valuable.

Only certain kinds of spiders make the right sort of thread, and one of the world's greatest businesses is to breed them and collect the material.

In astronomical telescopes and in certain microscopes the cross-hairs are made from the uniform web of spiders. The thread is used for making measurements. Cobweb forms one of the best materials for making these. It is collected by placing the spider upon a small spool. He is then gently shaken off, and as fast as he tries to descend, the thread is wound on to the spool.

The other day a cobweb fetched quite a high price for a very different purpose. In the making of a movie at Los Angeles an actor had to appear in one scene looking through a long window-pane with cobwebs. As no spider could be induced to spin the right sort of web over a property window, a search had to be made for a window of the right kind with the right sort of cobweb. When found it was bought at a high price and removed bodily from the house to which it belonged.

Demolish Famous Structure

Waterloo Bridge, spanning Thames in London, England, To Be Replaced Old Waterloo Bridge, still one of the finest structures of its kind in Europe, is doomed to demolition. The London County Council has voted to demolish the bridge and erect a new one nearby. The decision marked the end of seven years of controversy, complicated by the fact that expert opinion was divided on the feasibility of its preservation.

For more than a century Waterloo bridge has gracedly spanned the Thames. But it is apparent now to casual observers that it is very slowly sinking. It is the oldest bridge now standing within London, and in the work of John Hume. A massive stone structure of nine arches, carrying a level roadway, Waterloo Bridge was opened in 1817, and its capital cost was $322,000, more than that of any other important London bridge.

Investigate Radio Broadcasting

Parliamentary Committee To Be Established For This Purpose Equipped with full powers, a parliamentary committee will be established to investigate the Canadian radio broadcasting industry. Premier R. B. Bennett announced to the House of Commons. It will "advise and recommend a complete technical scheme of radio broadcasting for Canada as designed to ensure that Canadian sources are complete and satisfactory a service to the present development of radio science will permit" and will "investigate and report on the most satisfactory agency for carrying out the scheme."

Advocates of public and private ownership will be afforded opportunity of presenting their views before the committee, the premier said. He will be made of the report of the Aird Commission which investigated the radio industry in 1929, and among other things, advocated nationalization of broadcasting.

Members of the parliamentary committee will be selected from among the various parties in the House, the actual selections being left to the whips. A similar committee was established during the 1930 session. But it held no meetings because of the sudden prorogation of parliament on the eve of the general election.
